The regular army got fifty-two recruits yesterday. Navy headquarters reported twenty enlistments out of more than a hundred applicants; sixteen men joined the Marine Corps, though five times that number applied for admission, and floo men enrolled for service in the United States Naval Reserve force.

nothing that looks less like a cat than an armored tank.

Sergeant H. E. Clark, the artist of recruiting headquarters, drew a picture last week of a battle-scarred veteran of the back fences that had been cornered. His tail had been chewed off, one ear was gone and he had lost an eye, but he was still spitting defiance at a ring of foes which his claws held at bay. "If you can fight like me," reads the legend underneath, "join the tanks."

As soon as that picture was posted a stream of volunteers began to pour into the recruiting offices. Boys under twenty-one, men past thirty-one, married and single, joined.

Three corporals, a sergeant or so and the two captains have been kept busy ever since signing up men. Corporals Stanley McCarthy and Everett Bunn are constantly at work passing men through the preliminary examinations and sending them to Fort Slocum. More than 300 have been sent away in the last week.

France for immediate service.

Carlos de Florez, who served with the French army, will show some new pictures of the battle of Soissons and will tell the story of the daily life of the soldier in France. Among the patrons of the meeting are Gaston Liebert, Paul Fuller, ir., Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Frederic R. Coudert and Mrs. Ralph Pulitzer.

Need for Cars Urgent

James A. Hemstreet, of the A. A. A., who directs the New York to Upton service, communicated his thanks to the American Defence Society last night. He said:

"We have found," said Dr. Bailey, "that 65 per cent of the accidents which befell one group of aviators whom we examined was due to a lack of knowledge of the powers of endurance of a human being in high altitudes. Without taking stock of their physical condition, or their mental state, these men set forth on their sky-ward iaunts. A human system must
